Description:

From The author is a retired Naval flight officer, who made several cruises aboard various carriers as the radar operator in the back seat of an F-14. One of those cruises included an ejection when the ship's arresting gear failed to arrest the F-14 before it went overboard. Even more challenging were his two assignments to the Topgun program, the Navy's elite fighter-training school, first as a student, then in the coveted position of an instructor. During that second assignment, he also helped with the Navy's support and the flying sequences of the classic movie Top Gun. (See above for the correct spelling.) The author is a straightforward, even plain writer, but he also has an eye for detail, and gives those details in full measure about experiences for which there is an abiding, even devouring, curiosity among aviation buffs. They will enjoy. --Roland Green

Review "The author is a straightforward, even plain writer, but he also has an eye for detail, and gives those details in full measure about experiences for which there is an abiding, even devouring, curiosity among aviation buffs. They will enjoy." (Booklist)

"Dave Baranek isn't just an observer in this world; he has flown with and taught the best." (Ed Ruggero, author of The First Men In)

"An engagingly written retrospective." (Barrett Tillman, author of Victory and Clash of the Carriers)
